

Turiya Hodge is the owner of Myabah Consulting Services and founder of Social Media Saturdays, an online platform dedicated to helping professionals, organizations and companies grow their business by social media strategic planning. Turiya understands that owning and operating a business comes with many challenges but believes that social media marketing should not be one of them. Turiya shows business leaders how to successfully integrate online strategies that will allow them to attract, engage and excite their audience, create brand evangelists and ultimately generate revenue. With over 20 years of sales and customer service experience, she has worked with some of the top Fortune 500 companies but longed to be back in the small business arena. She contributes her knowledge and skills in social media strategies, internet marketing, sales and management, team development and leadership. Turiya knows that there is something very special in working with small business owners and entrepreneurs. It's up close and personal. Her greatest honor is to work with people that are dedicated to making a positive impact on the lives of others.
